EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, April 30.

Extract of a Letter from Portsmouth, April 28.

"THIS Morning sailed 25 victuallers and store ships, under convoy of the Romney man of war for Quebec.

"This morning came into harbour his majesty's ship Resolution, Sir Chaloner Ogle commander."

A letter from Plymouth, dated April 29, says, "Sailed the Proteus man of war, for Newfoundland, with the trade for that place under her convoy."

A correspondent hopes the paragraph respecting the scarcity of hemp in yesterday's paper is not true. It is a pity, says he, that hemp should be scarce in a country where so many people deserve to be hanged.

The Premier speaking of the policy of a review of the British fleet, in order to "strike an awe throughout Europe," a member of the minority wide answer, that, "that nothing would strike so effectual an awe as the striking off a few heads, and placing them at the tops of the mizen masts."

Jemmy Twitcher speaking of the grand Portsmouth review, said, "he would dazzle the King with a naval splendor!"—— "Indeed" replied a minority peer,—You have long blinded one of the best sovereigns in Europe."

A wag reading the paragraph in Saturday's paper of his majesty's setting out for Chatham, exclaimed, "Well, now we shall have a change of ministry at last; for since Chatham would not go to the King, the King is gone to Chatham."

The policy of the Court of France was never more conspicuous than at present. They fomented a quarrel between the Court of Russia and the Porte; they have stirred up the Emperor to recover Silesia, and meddle in the succession to the Electorate of Bavaria. Not content with disturbing the peace of Europe, they entered into an alliance with the rebel subjects of this country, in expectation that our allies upon the continent will not, from their own affairs, be able to assist us against the designs formed by France. It is somewhat unfortunate and no less remarkable, that there was not a man in the nation imposed upon by the pacific language of France, but the very men who should not be deceived.

MAY 1. It is the report of the day, that war will be declared against France within a fortnight, and that preparations are making by the Heralds and other officers, who have had notice given them to be ready.

Letters received yesterday from Lisbon, mention, that 6 sail of American vessels, all laden with rice, indico and tobacco, have been taken and carried into that place.

Yesterday orders were sent down to Portsmouth and Chatham, for no foreigners, of any nation to be suffered to go into any of his Majesty's docks.

Yesterday some dispatches were brought to Lord Weymouth's office from Paris.

Yesterday Governor Boyd set off, to embark with the Manchester regiment for Gibraltar.

General Haldimand sailed last Tuesday from Portsmouth for Quebec.

A letter from Jersey says, "a sailing boat arrived here from Cherbourg, brings advice, that a brig had been fitted out there for Charlestown, her cargo consists of great quantities of blankets, coarse woollens, &c. Three officers of the Irish brigades embarked on board her the morning she sailed.

MAY 5. We are informed that a motion is to be made in the House of Commons, for an humble petition and remonstrance to be immediately prepared and presented to the French King, humbly requesting that his Christian Majesty will not suffer d'Estaing to sail, till his brother of Great-Britain shall have finished the review of the English fleet at Portsmouth.

It is not impossible, that while a certain King is flattered with having 40 sail of the line in one part of the world, d'Estaing may be taking care, that he shall not have an inch of dominion in another part of the world.

MAY 7. The Admirals Byron and Hyde Parker are to command the division of the fleet destined for North America. If d'Estaing is gone to that part of the world, and it is generally admitted and believed that he is more than half way there by this time, instead of sailing, our fleet has been kept at Spithead to be reviewed by his Majesty.

As the orders of council for sending a fleet after Mons. d'Estaing passed through the office of Lord George Germaine, it is evident that the Toulon fleet is gone to America.——Alas! poor Howe! to what a perilous situation has an ignorant ministry reduced you!

Almost all the public prints mention there being 42 sail of the line at Spithead, besides half a dozen frigates. In fact there are no more than 32 ships of the line and 3 frigates.

The reason assigned by the Congress for recalling Mr. Deane from Paris, is, that they want his presence to inform them exactly and fully of the state of things in Europe, at this very critical period. The French King, as a mark of his peculiar esteem for Mr. Deane, has given him a box of great value and exquisite workmanship, with his picture richly set in diamonds; and given him a letter written in his own hand to the Congress, strongly testifying his entire approbation of every part of Mr. Deane's conduct of the treaty lately concluded with America, and of his inviolable attachment to the letter and spirit of that treaty, which he shall ever hold sacred; and nothing shall be wanting on his part to establish and complete the mutual advantages of it to both countries.

A Tar hearing a paragraph read to him the other day of a great person's not being sea-sick during the whole of his voyage, exclaimed, "That may be, but I'll be d—d if he was aboard that fleet, when engaged, if he would not make buttons."

MAY 9. If Count d'Estaing is gone to America, as is generally supposed, he will find our fleet there an easy conquest. Lord Howe has no more than 3 ships of the line; and as to his frigates there are but few. No less than 40 of his frigates have been recalled by orders which went from hence about a month ago. This shews what blunderers our ministers are. Instead of strengthening the fleet in North America, they have weakened it. The guards were also recalled at the same time.

Upon the same blundering principle, the Ministry are sending a force to Halifax. The 70th (General Pigot's) the Argyllshire, a new corps; Maclain's (in which the Duke of Hamilton) also one of the new Corps, have all embarked at Greenock for Halifax. This is an idle, and it is feared, will prove a wicked Measure. Halifax is no defensible. It is more than a Thousand to one they will be all taken. They would have been better employed, in protecting the Coast of Scotland.

No Reinforcements have been sent, nor are to be sent to the armies at Philadelphia or N. York. General Howe's Army have been repeatedly assured, that at least 10,000 Men will arrive by the first Week in May. How great will be their Disappointment, when they find they have been deceived. A wise Minister would either have reinforced or recalled, these brave Troops. They are too few to be of any real service there, and too many, and too Valuable, to be left; which it is feared will be the Case, if Count d'Estaing is gone to co-operate with General Washington.

In all the Seaports of France publick Notices are posted up, that Convoys will be appointed in the Month of June next, and regularly afterwards for all such Ships as are bound to any Port of the Dominions of the Independent States of America. This places it beyond a doubt that the French Court mean to protect their Trade to the utmost.

Tobacco is the Staple of America, which the French, and it is believed, the Spaniards have agreed to take from them. Salt is a grand Point of French Produce, and brings in a great Revenue, which the Congress have stipulated to take for a certain Time from France only.

The Emoluments of the American Commissioners are as follows, viz—1000 l. each for a service of plate, 500 each for Sea stores, &c. and 100 each per week ballary, except Lord Carlisle the President, who has three Times that Sum.

BOSTON, July 2.

On Tuesday last arrived in port the private armed ship Marlborough, Capt. Babcock, together with 5 prizes, laden with rum, sugar, cotton, cocoa, &c. &c. taken by the Marlborough and other vessels of war, fitted out by the inhabitants of these United States, to cruize against their enemies.

Extract of a Letter from a gentleman at Brest, to his friend here, dated May 13, 1778.

——"I am here on account of the Ranger's late success. Capt. Jones has been up St. George's channel, spiked up 30 or 40 cannon at Whitehaven, and set fire to the shipping, but could not stay long enough to fire many. He then fell in with the Drake sloop of war, which was sent out after him, and engaged her 65 minutes, when she struck to him; he risked her so often (7 times) that he killed and wounded 42 men; he lost himself, 3 killed and 4 wounded. The Ranger had 18 guns and 123 men; the Drake 20 guns, and 136 men. Capt. Jones had thinned his crew by his prizes, of which he made 5; three he sunk, and two are in this port, exclusive of the Drake. It was pleasant to see the British flag flying under the American stars and stripes."—— [By the English papers it appears, that Capt. Jones made his visit at Whitehaven on the 22d of April, with only 30 men in two boats: That the next day, all the silver plate was removed on board the Ranger (for its greater security) from St. Mary Isle house, the seat of the Earl of Selkirk: that one of the ships carried into Brest was from London for Dublin, with General Irwin's baggage on board: And that as soon as Capt. Jones was gone, they began to work on some batteries at Whitehaven and Workington, and to erect a number of formidable ones at Liverpool.]

JULY 9.

By a Gentleman late from Halifax, we learn, that two regiments of foreign troops (whom the British commander did not wish to trust through the Jerseys) with a large quantity of heavy artillery, has arrived there from Philadelphia.

NEW-LONDON, July 17.

Monday morning last a fleet of 17 sail of shipping, from Newport, went up the sound.

The same day a fleet from the Westward of 20 sail, about half of them armed vessels, anchored in the sound off Lyme.—They came to sail on Tuesday afternoon, and went to the Eastward, supposed to be bound to Newport. While the fleet were at anchor, on monday night, four men (Americans) being ordered in a boat from one vessel to another, with the Captain of one of the transports on board, they took an opportunity to row off with the boat, and got safe on shore with the Captain. They say there were about 3000 troops on board, and that they were bound to Newport. They also inform, that General Clinton was arrived at New York, and that the accounts were that his whole loss, since leaving Philadelphia, amounted to about 3000 men. The Captain of a small cruizer who was in the sound, says, that one of the transports had some field pieces on board, which they discharged at him.

From the NEW JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR, Brunswick, July 3, 1778.

"NOT satisfied with robbing me and the brave men under my command of the credit due to us with respect to the affair of the 28th, such an atrocious attack has been made on my conduct, and so gross are the injuries I have received, that I have demanded a Court-martial, which is to be held to morrow: the reason that I address this note to you, is, that a most invidious, dishonest, and false relation has appeared in your paper of July the 1st. I must therefore intreat, as you are an honest man, that you will desire your readers to consider the aforesaid relation as a fiction. Before long they shall have a minute, just, and faithful account; in the mean time I beg you will print this note, and am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

Mr. Isaac Collins.

SIR, July 3, 1778.

"I Desire you will consider this as a postscript to the note I have already addressed to you, and that you will request whatever printer is your correspondent at Philadelphia, to insert the note and postscript in his paper.——To call the affair a complete victory, would be a dishonourable gasconade—it was indeed a very handsome check, which did the Americans honour. No affair can be more convincing of what they are equal to; in a retrograde manoeuvre of near four miles, no confusion was observable but what arose, and ever will arise, from a monstrous abuse which, if tolerated, will be one day fatal—I mean the liberty which individuals, without authority, take to direct and give their opinions. The behaviour of the whole, both men and officers, was so equally good that it would be unjust to make distinctions; though I confess it is difficult to refrain from paying compliments to the artillery, from General Knox and Colonel Oswald down to the very driver. It is difficult to say which was the decisive point—It was a battle in pieces, and by dint of fighting in a variety of places—in the plain and in the woods—by advancing and retreating, the enemy were at last fairly worn down. I am, Sir, yours, &c. CHARLES LEE.

Charles-Town.

SUNDAY, June 28, 1778.

IT is this day ordered by His Excellency the President, in Council, that the following Resolve of Congress, dated the 8th instant, and just received express from Congress be forthwith published by the Sheriff of Charlestown District, in the like Manner in which Proclamations are usually published; that all Persons concerned may pay due Regard thereto, and govern themselves accordingly.

JOHN COLCOCK, Secretary P. C.

Whereas the Exportation of Provisions from these States hath occasioned much difficulty in procuring supplies for our armies; and by the capture of vessels concerned in such exportation, the armies of the enemy have been freed from such distresses, that would greatly have embarrassed their operations: And whereas, for the easy supply of our armies, and to embarrass and distress the enemy the ensuing campaign, it is absolutely necessary an embargo should be immediately laid, to prohibit such exportations; and as, from the distance of the States from Congress, and the different periods of assembling their legislatures, the good end of such embargo, would be wholly frustrated, should Congress not proceed to impose the embargo; therefore Resolved, That an embargo be, and it is hereby laid, to prohibit the exportation of wheat, flour, rye, Indian corn, rice, bread, beef, pork, bacon, live stock, and other provisions from any of these United States, from and after the 10th day of June instant, until the 15th day of November next, unless sooner revoked by Congress. Provided, that this embargo shall not be construed to prevent the taking on board such provision as shall be necessary for the stores only of any ships or vessels of war, or others trading to and from these States.

RESOLVED,

That it be be earnestly recommended to the respective States, to take the most effectual measures for carrying the foregoing resolution into immediate execution.

Extract from the Minutes,

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

CHARLES-TOWN, Aug. 12.

THE arrival of the Toulon squadron, under the command of the count d'Estaing, off the capes of Delaware, on the 9th of July, and of its taking pilots on board, and sailing for New-York, after having landed his excellency M. Girard, minister plenipotentiary from his most Christian majesty to the United States, and the hon. Silas Deane, one of the American commissioners returned from the court of France, is now confirmed, beyond dispute, from different quarters. It consists of one ship of 110 guns, (called 90) two of 84, eight of 74, and one of 64, besides 4 frigates of 36 guns each, and 4 xebecks; so well manned as to be able to spare 3 or 4000 well disciplined troops for other services, should they be wanted at sea or on shore. According to information from Capt. Nicholson (late commander of the Hornet continental sloop of war) who was a passenger on board the admiral's ship, and landed at Chincoteague on the 9th of July, with dispatches for congress, War against Britain was formally proclaimed in the fleet, at sea, on the 10th of May last; in consequence whereof, upon their arrival on the coast of Virginia, they took and sunk a British privateer ship of 26 guns, commanded by capt. James Duncan, and drove a man of war on shore, then supposed the Roebuck, but since said to be the Mermaid; after which they are said to have also taken the Rose man of war, a ship of 20 wooden guns, from New Providence for London, and recaptured several French merchantmen. Contrary winds had detained this squadron 5 weeks after its departure, in the Mediterranean, otherwise, it is probable, Lord Howe would have been saved the trouble of removing his master's ships, and the transports with baggage and stores out of Delaware bay.——In a late English paper, we find the following intelligence given, "That on the 7th of April, upon the arrival of a extra express at Toulon, the Eclair yacht was to have sailed in 2 hours, but a second express arriving she was stopt; and immediately, the naval preparations in all the docks were redoubled, an extraordinary number of hands were set to work upon the Tonnant and Cesar, that they might sail with the count d'Estaing, and the people worked day and night: That all post captains were summoned to a council of war, on board the Zele on the 9th, immediately after which the admiral shifted his flag to the Languedoc: That the whole fleet weighed and sailed on the 13th: And that a messenger from court was detained on board, 'til they were a league at sea, in order to carry the news of their departure." Yet, notwithstanding this, and other as circumstantial information, it appears by other papers, that even so late as the 9th of May, the infatuated British ministry could not be persuaded to believe that any French ships of war had sailed for America.

Besides the above formidable fleet, a number of French frigates and xebecks have been sent out, to cruise in different stations, to protect the trade; in consequence whereof, to the Northward, the public has been cautioned, "not to be anxious in making hasty purchases of cloathing and other necessaries, at the very extravagant prices demanded by the present dealers."

By way of New-London, we are advised, of the arrival of the French squadron at Sandy-Hook; that they were blocking up Lord Howe in New-York harbour who had with him 3 64-gun ships and 8 or 10 frigates, to man which he had pressed the sweepings of the city, and many of the inhabitants, to the amount of about 4000: that general Washington and general Gates (the latter from Kingsbridge) were advancing to invest the city by land, while the count d'Estaing was preparing to bombard it.—But, it was apprehended, that the frigates of Lord Howe's fleet might attempt to escape thro' the passage called Hell Gate; and that Sir Henry Clinton, to prevent the further effusion of human blood, to which his royal master is so averse, may, at the same time, ship his troops, by small embarkations, to Rhode-Island, and thence steal away to Halifax, &c. or the West Indies.

The following are the names of the persons that embarked, and sailed from hence for Europe, on the 31st ult. in the ship Hope, James Gilles master, viz. Sir Edmund Head, Bart. with his only son, the lady and son of the hon. Thomas Knox Gordon (formerly the British king's chief justice here) Mr. George Kincaid and family, Miss McDonough, Walter Dick and wife, Messrs. William Heft, William Simpson, Robert Brailsford, George Lord, Miles Bartett, —— Kirkby, Robert Dee, William Walton, John Inglis, John McGillivrae, Samuel Price, William Curry, a son of the late George Wood book-binder, &c. &c.

Last saturday morning, the French ship Angelica, capt. Bloquerol, of and from Bourdeaux for this port, laden with salt and dry goods, having taken a pilot on board off George-Town who pretended to be a pilot, struck upon the shoal, to the northward of Sullivant's island, called the Rattle-Snake, and before she in the evening was entirely beat to pieces: the capt. and crew took to their boats and were saved; but the vessel and cargo are entirely lost, save a trunk or two. —This ship sailed from Bourdeaux, in company with the Sutton frigate, on the 6th of June. The captain says, war was not then publickly declared in France, or known to be in England; that Spain had finally followed the example of France, in seizing the British ships in all her ports; that there was a large fleet of men of war at St. Helen's, but those destined for N. America had not yet sailed; that the fleet at Brest consisted of 25 ships of the line, 12 whereof had been for some time in constant readiness to execute any orders they might receive, which it was thought would be to pursue the first squadron that should sail from St. Helen's; and that such attention was then paid to the complete manning of the French navy with seamen, that he was not allowed to bring out more than 4 amongst his crew of 25 men.

Last saturday a cartel sailed for St. Augustine, with 82 prisoners, chiefly the crews of the Tonyn's Revenge and Ranger privateers, the officers whereof, it is said, will be detained here, 'til the people taken in our late brig Comet, shall be released from their inhuman confinement on board the infernal prison-ships at New-York—a description of which we purpose to give our readers in our next.

The same day the schooner Willing-Maid, of and for this port from North-Carolina, laden with tobacco, arrived within the bar, and was driven on shore near the light-house, where she is lost.

Mr. Archibald Brown and Alexander Wright, Esqrs of this state, Mr. Thomas Young and —— Murray of Philipsburgh, Esq; late of the state of Georgia, are returned here, from Europe, by way of the Northern colonies. These gentlemen confirm the account we had of the death of Lord Chatham.

Since friday last, we have had very hard blowing weather, the wind at E. and N.E. but on monday, so violent a storm (beginning at about 2 o'clock in the morning) that, 'til between 3 and 5 in the afternoon, when the gale shifted to N. and N.W. a hurricane was apprehended. In this gale, the ship Barmaren, arrived within the bar the day before from Boston, was driven ashore upon Cumming's island; the privateer ship General-Moultrie, upon Haddrel's point; the French polacre Cleopatre (dismasted) schooner Bienheureuse (both ready to sail for North-Carolina) and 9 coasting schooners and 1 sloop, upon James Island; a schooner, into the marsh up Cooper river; the schooner Ark, upon General Gadsden's wharf; the Spanish schooner St. Antonio, almost up to the curtain line near Craven's bastion; the ship Lydia, capt. Moore (since got off) the ship Polly, capt. Earl, and brig Betsy, capt. Hurton (her bowsprit and head carried away) in the space between Gaillard's and Prioleau's wharves; the sloop Joseph & Benjamin, capt. Dickinson, loaded with indico and tobacco, and ready to sail on a voyage, was bulged, and filled, on the north side of the wharf before the Exchange; the brig Washington, at Pritchard's wharf, also received considerable damage; as did the schooner Liberty, against the north side of Mr. Beale's, and the schooner General Green in the Market dock. Several other vessels were injured, and there was great destruction amongst boats and canoes, trees and fences, and the walls of the house burnt in January last. It is to be feared, that much damage has also been done along the sea coast and in the country. Had the wind continued at E. when the flood tide should have come in (at which time it only began to ebb) it is probable, not one vessel in the harbour would have been saved. The wind was accompanied with an incessant heavy rain for about 15 hours. Notwithstanding the violence of the wind and rain, and raging of the sea, Gadsden's bridge, leading from Sullivant's island to Haddrel's point, remains entire, and proves the goodness of its construction.

Capt. Remaine Ingoult, who favoured us with the first account of the arrival of the French fleet off the capes of Delaware, sailed from hence the 2d of May last, commander of the ship Elizabeth bound to Bourdeaux, but was taken the next day, by the brig Lord Howe of 14 guns, capt McLean, and carried to St. Augustine; and he remained on board the brig, upon Capt. McLean's telling him he was to go directly to New-York, where he would procure him a passage to Europe. On the 18th of June the brig left St. Augustine, but instead of going for New-York, she proceeded directly on a cruize off cape Look Out; and on the passage he was frequently urged to enter and make his fortune in the brig, but he constantly refused. At length capt. McLean said he must have a pilot, and that he (Ingoult) must go in his boat and decoy one off. Ingoult refusing this also, was directly put in irons, and confined below among the sick, where he continued two days. McLean being then off Currituck inlet, under French colours, by which he had decoyed and taken some small craft, again insisted on Ingoult's getting him a pilot; which, to avoid being again confined in irons, he pretended readily to agree to. He was accordingly sent in the boat, the crew being charged to blow his brains out the moment he should attempt to betray them, and a pilot was soon brought on board the brig, by whose means several more small craft were decoyed and taken. Not satisfied with captures of so trifling value, capt. McLean then formed the design of fitting tenders, to go into the inlets and cut vessels out, and, thinking Ingoult now pretty well reconciled to his situation, offered the command of one of them to him, to be under the direction of his first lieutenant in another. Two small vessels were accordingly armed, manned, and victualled, proper signals fixed, and sent in for the inlet, one commanded by the lieutenant, the other by Ingoult under his direction. On the 7th of July they set off from the brig, and Ingoult, having three other Frenchmen amongst the crew, with whom he had preconcerted matters, as soon as he got to the bar, pushed the vessel in, and told his English companions, that he had been their prisoner a long time, it was but fair they should be his in turn, and they must go with him to Newbern. He accordingly arrived with them on the 17th at Newbern, where soon after hearing that a war was commenced between the French and English, he immediately travelled for this town, in hopes here to obtain the command of a vessel to cruize against the enemies of the United States and their friend his King.
